

Legal Planning Document Made Outside BC for Financial Affairs Requirements to be legally valid for use in BC as an Enduring Power of Attorney

Sometimes when people move to BC they bring legal planning documents, made for another jurisdiction, and want to use these documents in BC. Sometimes people may not become BC residents but want a legal planning document they made outside BC, to be legally recognized in BC perhaps to deal with assets they own in BC.

What kind of legal planning document is this about?

This information is about a legal planning document made outside BC that is:

- Validly made and still effective according to the legislation of the jurisdiction where it was made and where the person who made it was ordinarily resident, and
- Appointing one or more people to make decisions about financial affairs on behalf of the person who made it, and
- Able to be used if the person who made it becomes mentally incapable of managing or making decisions about their finances.

In almost all cases, the document would contain the words 'power of attorney' in its name.

If you need information about a legal planning document made outside BC that deals with health care, see last heading on page 2.

Are legal planning documents made outside BC automatically recognized for use in BC? NO.

Section 38 of the BC Power of Attorney Act outlines requirements for a legal planning document for financial affairs made outside BC to be recognized as an Enduring Power of Attorney (EPA or EPoA) as if made under Parts 2&3 of the BC Power of Attorney Act — this is referred to as “deemed enduring power of attorney.”

More details about the legal requirements are set out in the Power of Attorney Regulation.

How does the document made outside BC get to be accepted for use in BC?

In order for a legal planning document for financial affairs that was made outside BC to be recognized in BC, the document made outside BC must be accompanied by a completed Certificate of Extrajurisdictional Solicitor.

The prescribed Certificate is found in the Power of Attorney Regulation under Schedule. An exact copy of the Certificate is attached here after page 2.

If the document made outside BC, meets the requirements to be recognized in BC and is accompanied by the completed Certificate, it can only be used in BC if the person who made it and the person named in it (who has authority to act) are at least 19 years of age.

Does it matter where the legal planning document was made? YES.

BC legislation sets out requirements to recognize a legal planning document (as described above) made outside BC only if made within the following jurisdictions:

- Canada (any province/territory outside BC),
- United States of America,
- United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland,
- Australia, or
- New Zealand.

What does the Certificate of Extrajurisdictional Solicitor look like? Who signs it?

The Certificate for a document to be a “deemed enduring power of attorney” is provided here after page 2. The Certificate must be completed by a solicitor who is permitted to practise in the jurisdiction outside BC where the document was made.

A lawyer is a solicitor; in some jurisdictions a notary public or other party may have authorization to act as a solicitor to sign the Certificate.

You do NOT have to contact the same solicitor who originally made the document, but you will want to contact a solicitor who is knowledgeable about and familiar with such documents. In some legal practices, this may come under Wills and Estates.

What else is required in addition to getting the Certificate completed?

- The completed Certificate must accompany the legal planning document made outside BC.
- At the time of using the document in BC, the maker of the document and the person authorized to act must both be 19 years of age or older.
- The person authorized to act must follow the duties required under the BC Power of Attorney Act (PoA Act). The duties are listed in section 19 of the PoA Act. The Nidus Resource Centre also provides a fact sheet Role of Attorney.

Does BC legislation apply to the “deemed enduring power of attorney”? YES, unless....

The BC Power of Attorney Act and the Power of Attorney Regulation apply to a “deemed enduring power of attorney” — unless the adult who made the document is NOT ordinarily resident in BC.

The BC Power of Attorney Regulation says that UNLESS an adult is ordinarily resident in BC, a “deemed enduring power of attorney” is not subject to sections 34 and 35 of the BC Power of Attorney Act. These sections outline the roles of the BC Public Guardian and Trustee to: 1) receive and respond to complaints, and 2) conduct investigations and respond as appropriate to the outcome of an investigation. This includes complaints and investigations about abuse and neglect of the adult by those appointed in the “deemed EPA.”

What if I can't get the Certificate of Extrajurisdictional Solicitor signed?

If you can't get the required Certificate completed, or if the document was made in a jurisdiction not listed for recognition, an adult may make a BC document.

- Click to read about qualifications to make the Enduring Power of Attorney in BC
- If the adult does not qualify to make the BC EPA, click to read about the RA7ALL (which can include authority for routine finances).
- You will also find lots of information, stories and videos on the Nidus Resource Centre website at nidus.ca

If the person who made the non-BC legal planning document for finances owns real estate or other property outside BC, you may want to keep the document whether or not a Certificate is completed to deem it an EPA in BC. For example, if the person now lives in BC but owns real estate in Ontario, an appointee in the Ontario Continuing Power of Attorney for Property document may need to use it to deal with the Ontario real estate - unless Ontario residency is required.

What if there is a legal planning document made outside BC for health care?

A similar procedure is designed to recognize legal planning documents for health care matters made outside BC. In this case such a document can be recognized for use in BC as a Representation Agreement under section 9 (RA9).
